

CDW Canada Opens New Calgary Hub, Deepening Its Investment in Western Canada

The new Beltline office brings together coworkers and national technology leadership, reinforcing CDW Canada's 30-year commitment to Calgary

Toronto, ON - August 25, 2026

CDW Canada, a leading provider of technology solutions and services for business, government, education and healthcare organizations, officially opened its new Calgary office today, adding to their Western Canada footprint. The technology hub houses the company's 24/7 National Operations Centre (NOC) and brings together key leaders in cybersecurity, managed services and AI.

The Calgary office positions CDW Canada as part of the city's growing innovation hub, giving local organizations direct access to technology experts and advisors who can support their transformation projects across cloud, cybersecurity, AI, hybrid infrastructure and modern workspace. With the global reach of CDW and a team rooted in the local market, the office is designed to help Calgary businesses innovate faster, improve operational efficiencies and stay competitive.

"CDW has had roots in Calgary since 1991, with a new office in the heart of downtown Calgary, this marks the next chapter of our investment in this region," said Ginette Adragna, Vice President & General Manager, CDW Canada. "This proximity brings us closer to the customers and partners we work with, enabling stronger collaboration and more localized delivery."

CDW helps organizations move from strategy to execution by addressing common challenges such as integrating complex environments, embedding security across the lifecycle, workshopping AI workflows and optimizing outcomes through ongoing insights and managed services. As organizations accelerate investments in AI and digital transformation, CDW works closely with customers to turn innovation into measurable outcomes - helping move projects beyond pilot stages while addressing real challenges around integration, governance and performance.

Across Alberta, CDW supports organizations in key sectors including energy, financial services, government, education and healthcare, delivering a broad range of solutions spanning hardware, software and integrated services. With leading technology partners across a strong partner ecosystem, CDW continues to invest in Western Canada, with an established presence in Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver - playing an active role in advancing how organizations adopt, secure and scale emerging technologies.

CDW's new Calgary office reflects the character of its home province. Local Alberta artwork is displayed throughout the space, meeting rooms are named after the Canadian Rockies, and a signature hat rack greets visitors at the entrance.

"Organizations across Alberta are navigating unprecedented change, from cybersecurity threats to the rapid adoption of AI and modern IT solutions. Our role is to help customers turn these challenges into opportunities by bringing together the expertise, services and technology that drive business outcomes. With a strong team based in Calgary, supported by the National organization, we're uniquely positioned to help local organizations innovate faster, operate more securely and achieve their growth ambitions," said Kevin Santos, Head of Enterprise Sales Calgary, CDW Canada.

CDW Canada is also celebrating refreshed office spaces in Vancouver and Edmonton, further reinforcing the commitment to providing localized support.
